The Big Seven: Human Rights Conventions & Judicial Declarations, published by the Pacific Regional Rights Resource Team (RRRT), is an accompanying volume to the Pacific Human Rights Law Digest.

It aims to serve as an important reference for Judges, Magistrates, legal practitioners and law students. It will also be useful for RRRT partners, human rights advocates and policy makers seeking to draw on international human rights law as a tool for initiating change in governance, policy, legislation, traditional and cultural practices in their own countries.

The Big Seven is divided into three parts:

Part I contains the text of the “mother” of all human rights conventions, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

While declarations are not legally binding, they recite the basic ideals to be upheld by States parties, many of which have incorporated their provisions in national laws and constitutions and in particular in the bills of rights.

Part II contains the seven United Nations core international human rights treaties. These covenants and conventions have the force of law for the States that ratify or accede to them.

Every one of our Pacific Island countries is a party to at least one of these treaties, thereby agreeing to universally accepted principles of human rights which apply to every woman, man and child. These treaties are at the core of the international system for the promotion and protection of human rights.

Each of these treaties has established a treaty body which is responsible for monitoring implementation by the respective States parties. Some of the treaties are also supplemented by optional protocols that deal with specific concerns and individual complaint mechanisms; however these are not included in this compilation.

Significantly, these international human rights standards have had an impact at the regional and national levels, forming the basis of bills of rights in constitutions and other legislation of many Pacific Island countries. They have also inspired instances of legal reform, as well as national policy and have been used as reference points for the formulation of guiding principles at the judicial level.

Part III contains seven judicial declarations; three of which have been authored by Magistrates and Judges from Pacific Island countries. Judicial declarations are not part of formal international law, and are therefore not binding on the Courts. However they are reflective of judicial thinking in the application of these instruments in domestic law and they underscore the increasing acceptance by the Courts of the universality of human rights.

RRRT's ultimate objective is to help build a human rights culture in the Pacific. It is hoped that promoting the use of conventions in law, practice and policy through compilations such as this will assist in this goal.

The Big Seven has been developed with the generous support of the New Zealand Agency for International Development (NZAID), which is a core funder of RRRT.

ABOUT RRRT

Initially established in 1995 as a gender and legal literacy programme funded by the UK Department for International Development (UK DFID), RRRT has since expanded its programme in response to elevated human rights needs in the Pacific and now supports and works with the largest pool of human rights defenders in the region.

RRRT, a United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) project, provides training, technical support, policy and advocacy advice in human rights to promote social justice and good governance throughout the Pacific.

In 1998, RRRT was awarded the prestigious Maurice Pate Award (United Nations Children's Fund) for its work in gender and human rights and in 2005, was chosen by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (Asia Pacific Office) as one of 14 "best practices" rights based projects in the region.

RRRT has programmes in the Cook Islands, Fiji, Kiribati, Samoa, Solomon Islands, Tonga, Tuvalu and Vanuatu. Its partners include governments, regional and civil society organisations.

RRRT's goal is "to strengthen the capacity of the Pacific region to promote principles of human rights and good governance in order to achieve democracy based on social justice".

RRRT seeks to achieve this goal through a combination of training, mentoring, linking and support to community organisations and Community Paralegals, its networks of Legal Rights Training Officers, Community Paralegals and civil society partners and through training at the regional level of lawyers, Magistrates, Judges and policy makers to adopt and apply human rights principles and good governance practices in their work.

of 10 December, 1948.*

PREAMBLE

Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world,

Whereas it is essential, if man is not to be compelled to have recourse, as a last resort, to rebellion against tyranny and oppression, that human rights should be protected by the rule of law,

Whereas it is essential to promote the development of friendly relations between nations,

2. There shall be no restriction upon or derogation from any of the fundamental human rights recognized or existing in any State Party to the present Covenant pursuant to law, conventions, regulations or custom on the pretext that the present Covenant does not recognize such rights or that it recognizes them to a lesser extent.

Entry into force: 4 January, 1969.

The States Parties to this Convention,

Considering that the Charter of the United Nations is based on the principles of the dignity and equality inherent in all human beings, and that all Member States have pledged themselves to take joint and separate action, in co-operation with the Organization, for the achievement of one of the purposes of the United Nations which is to promote and encourage universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms for all, without distinction as to race, sex, language or religion,

Considering that the Universal Declaration of Human Rights proclaims that all human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and that everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set out therein, without distinction of any kind, in particular as to race, colour or national origin,

Considering that all human beings are equal before the law and are entitled to equal protection of the law against any discrimination and against any incitement to discrimination,

Considering that the United Nations has condemned colonialism and all practices of segregation and discrimination associated therewith, in whatever form and wherever they exist, and that the Declaration on the Granting of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples of 14 December 1960 (General Assembly resolution 1514 (XV)) has affirmed and solemnly proclaimed the necessity of bringing them to a speedy and unconditional end,

Considering that the United Nations Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination of 20 November 1963 (General Assembly resolution 1904 (XVIII)) solemnly affirms the necessity of speedily eliminating racial discrimination throughout the world in all its forms and manifestations and of securing understanding of and respect for the dignity of the human person,

Convinced that any doctrine of superiority based on racial differentiation is scientifically false, morally condemnable, socially unjust and dangerous, and that there is no justification for racial discrimination, in theory or in practice, anywhere,

Alarmed by manifestations of racial discrimination still in evidence in some areas of the world and by governmental policies based on racial superiority or hatred, such as policies of apartheid, segregation or separation,

Resolved to adopt all necessary measures for speedily eliminating racial discrimination in all its forms and manifestations, and to prevent and combat racist doctrines and practices in order to promote understanding between races and to build an international community free from all forms of racial segregation and racial discrimination,

Bearing in mind the Convention concerning Discrimination in respect of Employment and Occupation adopted by the International Labour Organisation in 1958, and the Convention against Discrimination in Education adopted by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in 1960,

Desiring to implement the principles embodied in the United Nations Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and to secure the earliest adoption of practical measures to that end,

Have agreed as follows:

Adopted and opened for signature, ratification and accession by General Assembly resolution 34/180 of 18 December, 1979.

Entry into force: 3 September, 1981.

The States Parties to the present Convention,

Noting that the Charter of the United Nations reaffirms faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person and in the equal rights of men and women,

Noting that the Universal Declaration of Human Rights affirms the principle of the inadmissibility of discrimination and proclaims that all human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and that everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth therein, without distinction of any kind, including distinction based on sex,

Noting that the States Parties to the International Covenants on Human Rights have the obligation to ensure the equal rights of men and women to enjoy all economic, social, cultural, civil and political rights,

Considering the international conventions concluded under the auspices of the United Nations and the specialized agencies promoting equality of rights of men and women,

Noting also the resolutions, declarations and recommendations adopted by the United Nations and the specialized agencies promoting equality of rights of men and women,

Concerned, however, that despite these various instruments extensive discrimination against women continues to exist,

Recalling that discrimination against women violates the principles of equality of rights and respect for human dignity, is an obstacle to the participation of women, on equal terms with men, in the political, social, economic and cultural life of their countries, hampers the growth of the prosperity of society and the family and makes more difficult the full development of the potentialities of women in the service of their countries and of humanity,

Concerned that in situations of poverty women have the least access to food, health, education, training and opportunities for employment and other needs,

Convinced that the establishment of the new international economic order based on equity and justice will contribute significantly towards the promotion of equality between men and women,

Article 3

1. No State Party shall expel, return (“refouler”) or extradite a person to another State where there are substantial grounds for believing that he would be in danger of being subjected to torture.
2. For the purpose of determining whether there are such grounds, the competent authorities shall take into account all relevant considerations including, where applicable, the existence in the State concerned of a consistent pattern of gross, flagrant or mass violations of human rights.

Article 4

If a State Party which makes extradition conditional on the existence of a treaty receives a request for extradition from another State Party with which it has no extradition treaty, it may consider this Convention as the legal basis for extradition in respect of such offences. Extradition shall be subject to the other conditions provided by the law of the requested State.

3. States Parties which do not make extradition conditional on the existence of a treaty shall recognize such offences as extraditable offences between themselves subject to the conditions provided by the law of the requested State.

4. Such offences shall be treated, for the purpose of extradition between States Parties, as if they had been committed not only in the place in which they occurred but also in the territories of the States required to establish their jurisdiction in accordance with article 5, paragraph 1.

Article 9

1. Each State Party shall undertake to prevent in any territory under its jurisdiction other acts of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment which do not amount to torture as defined in article 1, when such acts are committed by or at the instigation of or with the consent or acquiescence of a public official or other person acting in an official capacity. In particular, the obligations contained in articles 10, 11, 12 and 13 shall apply with the substitution for references to torture of references to other forms of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

6. The Committee shall hold closed meetings when examining communications under this article.

7. The Committee shall forward its views to the State Party concerned and to the individual.

Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families

Adopted and opened for signature, ratification and accession by General Assembly resolution 45/158 of 18 December, 1990.

Entry into force: 1 July, 2003.

The States Parties to the present Convention,

Taking into account the principles embodied in the basic instruments of the United Nations concerning human rights, in particular the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention on the Rights of the Child,

Taking into account also the principles and standards set forth in the relevant instruments elaborated within the framework of the International Labour Organisation, especially the Convention concerning Migration for Employment (No. 97), the Convention concerning Migrations in Abusive Conditions and the Promotion of Equality of Opportunity and Treatment of Migrant Workers (No.143), the Recommendation concerning Migration for Employment (No. 86), the Recommendation concerning Migrant Workers (No.151), the Convention concerning Forced or Compulsory Labour (No. 29) and the Convention concerning Abolition of Forced Labour (No. 105),

Reaffirming the importance of the principles contained in the Convention against Discrimination in Education of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization,

Recalling the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, the Declaration of the Fourth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, the Code of Conduct for Law Enforcement Officials, and the Slavery Conventions,

Recalling that one of the objectives of the International Labour Organisation, as stated in its Constitution, is the protection of the interests of workers when employed in countries other than their own, and bearing in mind the expertise and experience of that organization in matters related to migrant workers and members of their families,

Recognizing the importance of the work done in connection with migrant workers and members of their families in various organs of the United Nations, in particular in the Commission on Human Rights and the Commission for Social Development, and in the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and the World Health Organization, as well as in other international organizations,

Recognizing also the progress made by certain States on a regional or bilateral basis towards the protection of the rights of migrant workers and members of their families, as well as the importance and usefulness of bilateral and multilateral agreements in this field,

Realizing the importance and extent of the migration phenomenon, which involves millions of people and affects a large number of States in the international community,

Aware of the impact of the flows of migrant workers on States and people concerned, and desiring to establish norms which may contribute to the harmonization of the attitudes of States through the acceptance of basic principles concerning the treatment of migrant workers and members of their families,

Considering the situation of vulnerability in which migrant workers and members of their families frequently find themselves owing, among other things, to their absence from their State of origin and to the difficulties they may encounter arising from their presence in the State of employment,

Convinced that the rights of migrant workers and members of their families have not been sufficiently recognized everywhere and therefore require appropriate international protection,

Taking into account the fact that migration is often the cause of serious problems for the members of the families of migrant workers as well as for the workers themselves, in particular because of the scattering of the family,

Bearing in mind that the human problems involved in migration are even more serious in the case of irregular migration and convinced therefore that appropriate action should be encouraged in order to prevent and eliminate clandestine movements and trafficking in migrant workers, while at the same time assuring the protection of their fundamental human rights,

Considering that workers who are non-documented or in an irregular situation are frequently employed under less favourable conditions of work than other workers and that certain employers find this an inducement to seek such labour in order to reap the benefits of unfair competition,

Considering also that recourse to the employment of migrant workers who are in an irregular situation will be discouraged if the fundamental human rights of all migrant workers are more widely recognized and, moreover, that granting certain additional rights to migrant workers and members of their families in a regular situation will encourage all migrants and employers to respect and comply with the laws and procedures established by the States concerned,

Convinced, therefore, of the need to bring about the international protection of the rights of all migrant workers and members of their families, reaffirming and establishing basic norms in a comprehensive convention which could be applied universally,

Have agreed as follows:

Itinerant workers, as defined in article 2, paragraph 2 (A), of the present Convention, shall be entitled to the rights provided for in part IV that can be granted to them by reason of their presence and work in the territory of the State of employment and that are compatible with their status as itinerant workers in that State.

Article 76

1. A State Party to the present Convention may at any time declare under this article that it recognizes the competence of the Committee to receive and consider communications to the effect that a State Party claims that another State Party is not fulfilling its obligations under the present Convention. Communications under this article may be received and considered only if submitted by a State Party that has made a declaration recognizing in regard to itself the competence of the Committee. No communication shall be received by the Committee if it concerns a State Party which has not made such a declaration. Communications received under this article shall be dealt with in accordance with the following procedure:

(a) If a State Party to the present Convention considers that another State Party is not fulfilling its obligations under the present Convention, it may, by written communication, bring the matter to the attention of that State Party. The State Party may also inform the Committee of the matter. Within three months after the receipt of the communication the receiving State shall afford the State that sent the communication an explanation, or any other statement in writing clarifying the matter which should include, to the extent possible and pertinent, reference to domestic procedures and remedies taken, pending or available in the matter;

(b) If the matter is not adjusted to the satisfaction of both States Parties concerned within six months after the receipt by the receiving State of the initial communication, either State shall have the right to refer the matter to the Committee, by notice given to the Committee and to the other State;

(c) The Committee shall deal with a matter referred to it only after it has ascertained that all available domestic remedies have been invoked and exhausted in the matter, in conformity with the generally recognized principles of international law. This shall not be the rule where, in the view of the Committee, the application of the remedies is unreasonably prolonged;

(d) Subject to the provisions of subparagraph (c) of the present paragraph, the Committee shall make available its good offices to the States Parties concerned with a view to a friendly solution of the matter on the basis of the respect for the obligations set forth in the present Convention;

(e) The Committee shall hold closed meetings when examining communications under the present article;

(f) In any matter referred to it in accordance with subparagraph (b) of the present paragraph, the Committee may call upon the States Parties concerned, referred to in subparagraph (b), to supply any relevant information;

(g) The States Parties concerned, referred to in subparagraph (b) of the present paragraph, shall have the right to be represented when the matter is being considered by the Committee and to make submissions orally and/or in writing;

(h) The Committee shall, within twelve months after the date of receipt of notice under subparagraph (b) of the present paragraph, submit a report, as follows:

(i) If a solution within the terms of subparagraph (d) of the present paragraph is reached, the Committee shall confine its report to a brief statement of the facts and of the solution reached;

(ii) If a solution within the terms of subparagraph (d) is not reached, the Committee shall, in its report, set forth the relevant facts concerning the issue between the States Parties concerned. The written submissions and record of the oral submissions made by the States Parties concerned shall be attached to the report. The Committee may also communicate only to the States Parties concerned any views that it may consider relevant to the issue between them. In every matter, the report shall be communicated to the States Parties concerned.

2. The provisions of the present article shall come into force when ten States Parties to the present Convention have made a declaration under paragraph I of the present article. Such declarations shall be deposited by the States Parties with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall transmit copies thereof to the other States Parties. A declaration may be withdrawn at any time by notification to the Secretary-General. Such a withdrawal shall not prejudice the consideration of any matter that is the subject of a communication already transmitted under the present article; no further communication by any State Party shall be received under the present article after the notification of withdrawal of the declaration has been received by the Secretary-General, unless the State Party concerned has made a new declaration.

1. A State Party to the present Convention may at any time declare under the present article that it recognizes the competence of the Committee to receive and consider communications from or on behalf of individuals subject to its jurisdiction who claim that their individual rights as established by the present Convention have been violated by that State Party. No communication shall be received by the Committee if it concerns a State Party that has not made such a declaration.
2. The Committee shall consider inadmissible any communication under the present article which is anonymous or which it considers to be an abuse of the right of submission of such communications or to be incompatible with the provisions of the present Convention.
3. The Committee shall not consider any communication from an individual under the present article unless it has ascertained that:
  - (a) The same matter has not been, and is not being, examined under another procedure of international investigation or settlement;
  - (b) The individual has exhausted all available domestic remedies; this shall not be the rule where, in the view of the Committee, the application of the remedies is unreasonably prolonged or is unlikely to bring effective relief to that individual.
4. Subject to the provisions of paragraph 2 of the present article, the Committee shall bring any communications submitted to it under this article to the attention of the State Party to the present Convention that has made a declaration under paragraph 1 and is alleged to be violating any provisions of the Convention. Within six months, the receiving State shall submit to the Committee written explanations or statements clarifying the matter and the remedy, if any, that may have been taken by that State.
5. The Committee shall consider communications received under the present article in the light of all information made available to it by or on behalf of the individual and by the State Party concerned.
6. The Committee shall hold closed meetings when examining communications under the present article.
7. The Committee shall forward its views to the State Party concerned and to the individual.
8. The provisions of the present article shall come into force when ten States Parties to the present Convention have made declarations under paragraph 1 of the present article. Such declarations shall be deposited by the States Parties with the Secretary-General of the United Nations, who shall transmit copies thereof to the other States Parties. A declaration may be withdrawn at any time by notification to the Secretary-General. Such a withdrawal shall not prejudice the consideration of any matter that is the subject of a communication already transmitted under the present article; no further communication by or on behalf of an individual shall be received under the present article after the notification of withdrawal of the declaration has been received by the Secretary-General, unless the State Party has made a new declaration.

Article 78

The provisions of article 76 of the present Convention shall be applied without prejudice to any procedures for settling disputes or complaints in the field covered by the present Convention laid down in the constituent instruments of, or in conventions adopted by, the United Nations and the specialized agencies and shall not prevent the States Parties from having recourse to any procedures for settling a dispute in accordance with international agreements in force between them.

PART VIII : GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 79

Nothing in the present Convention shall affect the right of each State Party to establish the criteria governing admission of migrant workers and members of their families. Concerning other matters related to their legal situation and treatment as migrant workers and members of their families, States Parties shall be subject to the limitations set forth in the present Convention.

Article 80

Article 82

The rights of migrant workers and members of their families provided for in the present Convention may not be renounced. It shall not be permissible to exert any form of pressure upon migrant workers and members of their families with a view to their relinquishing or foregoing any of the said rights. It shall not be possible to derogate by contract from rights recognized in the present Convention. States Parties shall take appropriate measures to ensure that these principles are respected.

Article 83

Each State Party to the present Convention undertakes:

2. Such denunciation shall become effective on the first day of the month following the expiration of a period of twelve months after the date of the receipt of the notification by the Secretary-General of the United Nations.
3. Such a denunciation shall not have the effect of releasing the State Party from its obligations under the present Convention in regard to any act or omission which occurs prior to the date at which the denunciation becomes effective, nor shall denunciation prejudice in any way the continued consideration of any matter which is already under consideration by the Committee prior to the date at which the denunciation becomes effective.

4. Following the date at which the denunciation of a State Party becomes effective, the Committee shall not commence consideration of any new matter regarding that State.

Any amendment adopted by a majority of the States Parties present and voting shall be submitted to the General Assembly for approval.

2. Amendments shall come into force when they have been approved by the General Assembly of the United Nations and accepted by a two-thirds majority of the States Parties in accordance with their respective constitutional processes.

3. When amendments come into force, they shall be binding on those States Parties that have accepted them, other States Parties still being bound by the provisions of the present Convention and any earlier amendment that they have accepted.

Bangalore Principles on the Domestic Application of International Human Rights Norms

Bangalore, India, 26 February 1988

CHAIRMAN'S CONCLUDING STATEMENT

Between 24 and 26 February 1988 there was convened in Bangalore, India a high-level judicial colloquium on the Domestic Application of International Human Rights Norms. The Colloquium was administered by the Commonwealth Secretariat on behalf of the Convenor, the Hon. Justice P. N. Bhagwati (former Chief Justice of India), with the approval of the Government of India, and with assistance from the Government of the State of Karnataka, India.

The participants were: Justice P N Bhagwati (India) (Convenor), Chief Justice E Dumbutshen (Zimbabwe), Judge Ruth Bader Ginsburg (USA), Chief Justice Muhammad Haleem (Pakistan), Deputy Chief justice Sir Mari Kapi (Papua New Guinea), Justice Michael D Kirby, CMG (Australia), Justice Rajsoomer Lallah (Mauritius), Mr Anthony Lester, QC (Britain), Justice P Ramanathan (Sri Lanka), Tun Mohamed Salleh Bin Abas (Malaysia) and Justice M P Chadrakantaraj Urs (India).

There was a comprehensive exchange of views and full discussion of expert papers. The Convenor summarised the discussions in the following paragraphs:

1. Fundamental human rights and freedoms are inherent in all humankind and find expression in constitutions and legal systems throughout the world and in the international human rights instruments.
2. These international human rights instruments provide important guidance in cases concerning fundamental human rights and freedoms.
3. There is an impressive body of jurisprudence, both international and national, concerning the interpretations of particular human rights and freedoms and their application. This body of jurisprudence is of practical relevance and value to judges and lawyers generally.
4. In most countries whose legal systems are based upon the common law, international conventions are not directly enforceable in national courts unless their provisions have been incorporated by legislation or into domestic law. However, there is a growing tendency for national courts to have regard to these international norms for the purpose of deciding cases where the domestic law – whether constitutional, statute or common law – is uncertain or incomplete.
5. This tendency is entirely welcome because it respects the universality of fundamental human rights and freedoms and the vital role of an independent judiciary in reconciling the competing claims of individuals and groups of persons with the general interest of the community.

6. While it is desirable for the norms contained in the international human rights instruments to be still more widely recognised and applied by national courts, this process must take fully into account local laws, traditions, circumstances and needs.
7. It is within the proper nature of the judicial process and well-established judicial functions of national courts to have regard to international obligations which a country undertakes – whether or not they have been incorporated into domestic law – for the purpose of removing ambiguity or uncertainty from national constitutions, legislation or common law.
8. However, where national law is clear and inconsistent with the international obligations of the State concerned, in common law countries the national court is obliged to give effect to national law. In such cases the court should draw such inconsistency to the attention of the appropriate authorities since the supremacy of national law in no way mitigates breach of an international legal obligation which is undertaken by a country.
9. It is essential to redress a situation where, by reason of traditional legal training which has tended to ignore the international dimension, judges and practising lawyers are often unaware of the remarkable and comprehensive developments of statements of international human rights norms. For the practical implementation of these views it is desirable to make provisions for appropriate course in universities and colleges, and for lawyers and law enforcement officials; provision in libraries of relevant materials; promotion of expert advisory bodies knowledgeable about developments in this field; better dissemination of information to judges, lawyers and law enforcement officials; and meetings for exchanges of relevant information and experience.
10. These views are expressed in recognition of the fact that judges and lawyers have a special contribution to make in the administration of justice in fostering universal respect for fundamental human rights and freedoms.

Victoria Falls Declaration of Principles for Promoting the Human Rights of Women

Zimbabwe, 19-20 August 1994

1. Participants reaffirmed the principles stated in Bangalore, amplified in Harare, affirmed in Banjul, confirmed in Abuja, reaffirmed at Balliol, Oxford and reinforced at Bloemfontein. These principles reflect the universality of human rights - inherent in men and women - and the vital duties of an independent judiciary in interpreting and applying national constitutions and laws in the light of those principles. These general principles are applicable in all countries, but the means by which they become applicable may differ.
2. All too often universal human rights are wrongly perceived as confined to civil and political rights and not extending to economic and social rights, which may be of more importance to women. Civil and political rights and economic and social rights are integral and complementary parts of one coherent system of global human rights.
3. Universal human rights are usually interpreted as applying to regulate the public sphere. Violations of human rights in the private sphere, including the family - the site of much of women's experience of violations - are usually perceived to be outside the reach of human rights. Although the state does not usually directly violate women's rights in the private sphere, it often supports or condones an exploitative family structure through various laws and rules of behaviour which legitimate the authority of male members over the lives of female members of the family and fails to act to protect women from private violations or tolerates or, indeed, encourages, a structure wherein private violations occur all too frequently.
4. Many of the existing international and regional human rights standards were formulated within a primarily male perspective and with insufficient gender sensitivity and therefore sometimes fail to provide protection for the gender specific interests of women. There is an urgent need for the formulation of further specific rights for women, particularly in the economic and social field. It is vital for women to be centrally involved in decision making at all levels.
5. Discrimination against women can be direct or indirect. Indirect discrimination requires particular scrutiny by the judiciary. There is a need to ensure not only formal, but also substantive equality for women and, for that purpose, affirmative action may be adopted if necessary.
6. Although international human rights are inherent in all humankind, very often such rights are perceived to be owned, only or largely, by men. Participants emphasised that the human rights of women are as valuable as the human rights of men.
7. International human rights instruments, both generally and particularly with reference to women, and their developing jurisprudence enshrine values and principles long recognised as essential to the happiness of humankind. These international instruments have inspired many of the constitutional guarantees of fundamental rights and freedoms within and beyond the Commonwealth. These constitutional guarantees should be interpreted with the generosity appropriate to charters of freedom. Particularly the known discrimination guarantee should be construed purposively and with a special measure of generosity.

8. It is essential to promote a culture of respect for internationally and regionally stated human rights norms and particularly those affecting women. Such norms should be applied in the domestic courts of all nations and given full effect. They ought not to be considered as alien to domestic law in national courts.
9. All Commonwealth governments should be encouraged to ratify the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women before the Fourth United Nations World Conference on Women to be held in Beijing in 1995. Those governments that have ratified the Convention with reservations should examine the content of those reservations, with a view to their withdrawal.
10. All Commonwealth governments should ensure that domestic laws are enacted or adjusted to conform with the international and regional human rights standards.
11. The judicial officers in Commonwealth jurisdictions should be guided by the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women when interpreting and applying the provisions of the national constitutions and laws, including the common law and customary law, when making decisions.
12. The speedy preparation of an optional protocol to enable individual petition under the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women should be encouraged.
13. All Commonwealth governments should subscribe to the principles contained in the Declaration on Violence Against Women, adopted by the UN General Assembly in December 1993. Violence against women is a form of discrimination and violation of human rights as stated in the Declaration.
14. All Commonwealth governments should offer appropriate assistance to the United Nations special rapporteur on violence against women.
15. There is a particular need to ensure that judges, lawyers, litigants and others are made aware of applicable human rights norms as stated in international and regional instruments and national constitutions and laws. It is crucially important for them to be aware of the provisions of those instruments, which particularly pertain to women.
16. New gender sensitised initiatives in legal education, provision of material for libraries, programmes of continuing judicial discussion and professional training to lawyers and other interest groups in the protection of the human rights of women and better dissemination of information about developments in this field to judges and lawyers should be undertaken for effective implementation of these principles.
17. There is a need to translate the international human rights instruments and the African Charter of Human and Peoples' Rights into local languages, in a form accessible to the people and governments should therefore undertake or support that task.
18. Governments should mount extensive awareness campaigns through diverse means to disseminate and impart human rights education and encourage and support efforts by non-governmental organisations in this context.
19. Non-governmental organisations play an important role in the dissemination of information about women's human rights and making women aware of those rights.

Governments should therefore acknowledge and support the work of non-governmental organisations in promoting the human rights of women.

20. Non-governmental organisations should be enabled to provide amicus curiae briefs and other legal advice, assistance and representation to women in cases involving human rights issues. Free legal aid and advice should be provided to women at state cost for enforcement of their human rights.

21. Public interest litigation and other means of access to justice to litigants, especially women, who wish to complain of violations of their rights should be developed. Non-governmental organisations involved in women's issues should also be permitted to bring violations of the human rights of women before the courts for redress.

22. Judges and lawyers have a duty to familiarise themselves with the growing international jurisprudence of human rights and particularly with the expanding material on the protection and promotion of the human rights of women.

23. Closer links and co-operation across national frontiers by the judiciary on the interpretation and application of human rights law should be encouraged.

24. Law schools should be encouraged to develop courses in human rights, which must include a module on the human rights of women.

Hong Kong Conclusions on the Domestic Application of International Human Rights Norms Relevant to Women's Human Rights

Hong Kong, 20-22 May 1996

Having regard to the central place of the Victoria Falls Declaration in the recognition and enforcement of the human rights of women, the participants in the Hong Kong colloquium of judges, lawyers and law academics from the Commonwealth countries of the Asia/Pacific region, reaffirmed the principles of the Victoria Falls Declaration and expressed their commitment to uphold and implement those principles.

Recalling the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women, the discussions at the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in New Zealand in 1995 the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action and the conclusions of the meeting of Commonwealth law Ministers in April 1996, the participants expressed their deep concern at the large scale violence against women and the girl-child which is taking place in various forms in most countries of the Commonwealth. Violence against women is a manifestation of historical unequal power relations between women and men which have led to domination over and discrimination against women and is a social mechanism by which the subordinate position of women is sought to be perpetuated. All Commonwealth Governments should condemn violence against women and girls as a violation of fundamental human rights, including the right to personal security and the right to be free from discrimination on the basis of sex. No law, custom, tradition, culture or religious consideration should be invoked to excuse violence against women. Judges and judicial officers at all levels should be gender-sensitive and aware of the need to protect women against violence through a proactive interpretation of the law.

The participants expressed particular concern at the many forms of violence against women in the family. This violence is widespread, but frequently goes unnoticed and unrestrained because of oppressive social, cultural or religious traditions and values. These factors have led to the subordination of women and continue to dominate social attitudes because of lack of awareness of basic human rights of women, as well as their economic dependence on men. It is incumbent on law enforcement agencies, the legal profession and the courts to intervene appropriately in relation to violence in the family and not to allow its perpetuation through indifference or inadequate response.

Participants recognised the importance of custom, tradition, culture and religion as a part of individual and group identity. They recognised that these concepts were sometimes interpreted so as to be oppressive to women. They stressed the need to preserve and enhance worthy customs, while at the same time discouraging those that have an adverse impact on women and girls.

Participants recognised that a majority of the world's refugees and internally displaced persons are women and children and that these persons are an especially vulnerable group who are frequently denied their basic human rights and subjected to violence and sexual exploitation. The importance of judicial sensitivity to gender specific violations of human rights in dealing with cases relating to physical or mental abuse and or claims to refugee status was underlined.

Recalling that the 1995 Meeting of Commonwealth Heads of Government at Auckland urged all Commonwealth governments to ratify the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and underlining the importance of accession, ratification and implementation of this Convention and other human rights treaties to the advancement at the national level of the human rights of women and the girl child, the participants noted that it would be desirable if all States in the region became parties to and implemented the Convention.

The participants noted that many opportunities exist for judges and other judicial officers to draw on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and other international human rights instruments so as to interpret and apply creatively constitutional provisions, legislation, the common law and customary law. In so doing, they drew attention to the wealth of decision from countries with shared jurisprudential traditions where judges had engaged in such creative interpretation and application. The importance of educating the judiciary and the legal profession with respect to international human rights standards and principles relevant to gender issues was stressed, as well as the need for national judiciaries to carry out studies on gender bias in the judicial process.

Participants noted that it was important that the judiciary reflect the population it serves. Accordingly, it encouraged the exploration of ways to ensure a gender balance in the judicial system.

Participants identified a number of areas where there are clear violations of the human rights of women which might be addressed by the utilisation of international norms in domestic decision making. These included, in particular, discrimination in matters of nationality, citizenship, property and inheritance, which has serious implications for the exercise and enjoyment by women of other fundamental human rights. Participants also encouraged the review of legislation to ensure its consistency with international human rights obligations undertaken by individual countries.

Noting the complementarity between the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention on the Rights of the Child, participants drew attention to the special vulnerability of the girl-child to violations of human rights and identified this as a matter requiring particular judicial attention. They noted that the principle of the best interests of the child could be used to promote the full enjoyment by the girl child of her rights.

Participants noted that litigation to advance the human rights of women was limited at both the national and international levels. They emphasised women's limited access to the judicial process to enforce their rights and they proposed the further development of a number of measures to increase women's access to justice, including legal literacy programmes and assisted legal advice and representation. Participants drew attention to the important role that the media could play in creating an awareness of the human rights of women. They suggested that consideration might also be given to encouragement of representative actions and relaxing traditional limitations on locus standi. They also supported the adoption of an optional complaints mechanism for the Women's Convention.

The Georgetown Recommendations and Strategies for Action on the Human Rights of Women and the Girl-Child

Georgetown, Guyana, 25 April 1997

During the last four years, an important series of judicial colloquia has been organised by the Gender and Youth Affairs Division and the Legal and Constitutional Affairs Division of the Commonwealth Secretariat, in collaboration with the Commonwealth Magistrates' and Judges' Association (CMJA).

The colloquia addressed women's human rights and the application within national legal systems of international norms relating to these rights. The first colloquium was held in Victoria Falls, Zimbabwe, for judges from the African Region; the second colloquium took place in Beijing at the NGO Forum during the UN Fourth World Conference on Women, and the third in Hong Kong for judges from the Asia-Pacific region. The last colloquium in the series was held in Georgetown, Guyana, 14-17 April 1997, principally for senior judges of the Caribbean region on the Promotion of Human Rights of Women and the Girl Child through the judiciary. It was co-Chaired by the only two women Chief Justices in the Commonwealth, The Hon. Madame Justice Desiree Bernard, the Chief Justice of Guyana, and The Hon. Madame Joan Sawyer, the Chief Justice of The Bahamas. The Keynote Address was delivered by The Hon. Mr. Justice P. N. Bhagwati, Vice Chairman of the UN Human Rights Committee and former Chief Justice of India.

The colloquium was organised in collaboration with the Commonwealth Foundation, the Caribbean Community Secretariat (CARICOM), and the Commonwealth Youth Programme, Caribbean Centre. It was attended by 40 male and female judges including 9 Chief Justices from the Caribbean, African, Asian and the South Pacific regions; legal practitioners; academics as well as representatives of the United Nations "Division for the Advancement of Women, UNIFEM; and ILO. The following NGOs were also represented: The Caribbean Association for Feminist Research and Action (CAFRA) of The Bahamas, the Belize Human Rights Commission, Development Alternatives for the New Era (DAWN), Women, Law and Development in Africa (WILDAF), the International Women's Rights Action Watch, Asia/South Pacific, Red Thread of Guyana, and the Federation of Women Lawyers of Guyana.

Participants agreed the following Georgetown Recommendations and Strategies for Action on the Human Rights of Women and the Girl Child. At the end of the colloquium participants established a Reference Group of senior judges to follow-up the recommendations contained in this document, as well as to assess the impact of previous Judicial Colloquia on the domestic enforcement of international human rights norms through national courts.

1. The participants reaffirmed the Victoria Falls Declaration of Principles for the Promotion of the Human Rights of Women (1994) and the Hong Kong Conclusions (1996) and commended these to States for acceptance and implementation.
2. The Colloquium welcomed the adoption of the Charter of Civil Society for the Caribbean Community by the Conference of Heads of Government at its 8th inter-sessional meeting in Antigua and Barbuda in February 1997.

3. The Colloquium underlined the fact that the human rights of women and of the girl child are an inalienable, integral and indivisible part of universal human rights, and they must be taken as forming part of mainstream human rights.
4. The Colloquium expressed concern that civil and political rights have received extensive attention within the mainstream human rights discourse while economic, social and cultural rights have been neglected. This has adversely affected women's concerns.
5. Traditional human rights theory primarily focuses on violations perpetrated by the State. This distinction between State responsibility in relation to public and private acts has contributed to a failure to recognise many violations of women's rights as human rights violations.
6. The Colloquium recognised that the fundamental duty of judges to ensure the fair and due administration of justice requires judges to be alert to manifestations of gender discrimination in the law and in the administration of justice, and to take such measures as lay within their power to redress or eliminate any such discrimination. The Colloquium also recognised that the community's understandings of fairness and equality may evolve over time and that judges had both the power and responsibility to adapt the common law or interpretations of constitutional provisions to meet the changing circumstances of society. The full enjoyment by women of their human rights could only be realised through the creative interpretation and effective enforcement of these rights by the courts. This can only occur if there is an independent and competent judiciary which enjoys the confidence of the people it serves.
7. The Colloquium noted with concern that some States in the Commonwealth support or condone an exploitative family structure through various laws and rules of behavior which legitimise the authority of the male over the female and fail to protect women from private violations of their rights.
8. The Colloquium emphasised that culture, customary and traditional practices or religion should not be invoked as justification for violations of the fundamental rights and freedoms of women.
9. The Colloquium emphasised the goal of universal ratification of international human rights instruments and relevant international labour conventions, in particular the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and the Convention on the Rights of the Child. It underlined the obligation of a States parties fully and effectively to implement their treaty obligations by bringing their Constitutions and domestic Law and practice into conformity with these human rights commitments. It also urged those States parties, which had entered reservations to conventions to consider their withdrawal.
10. The Colloquium emphasised the utility of international human rights norms to domestic litigation, noting that in general there was no constitutional or other bar to referring to international human rights treaties. Among other uses, these norms might in appropriate cases provide a standard that could be used in order to elucidate the meaning of constitutional guarantees.
11. Both the United Nations Declarations on the Elimination of Violence against Women and General recommendation 19 of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women recognised that violence against women takes many forms. These include domestic violence, rape (including rape within marriage), exploitation of girl children (including the disadvantaged), trafficking in women and girls, violence associated with prostitution and with pornography, dowry deaths, violence in the work place and sexual harassment. The personal, economic and social costs of this violence are enormous. States must take effective measures in accordance with the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence Against Women, and, where applicable, the Inter-American Convention on the Prevention, Punishment and Eradication of Violence. States parties should fulfill their obligations to prevent and eradicate these and other forms of violence against women, as an indispensable part of the process of eliminating gender discrimination.

12. The Colloquium noted with satisfaction that some countries had enacted legislation addressing domestic violence and other forms of violence against women. The Colloquium recommended that other States in the Commonwealth consider the enactment of similar legislation, and stressed the need for such legislation to be regularly monitored and updated as appropriate.

13. The Colloquium expressed its concern in regard to the commercial sexual exploitation of women and girls, including trafficking for the purposes of prostitution. The Colloquium urged States throughout the Commonwealth to take effective measures to eradicate this phenomenon. These measures could include the enactment of legislation (including appropriate penal provisions), and administrative and other measures such as efforts to rehabilitate and reintegrate into society those subjected to these violations.

14. The Colloquium acknowledged the work that the Commonwealth Secretariat has done in developing publications and training materials relating to human rights, including the human rights of women, and urged the organisation to continue this work.

15. Judges participating in the Colloquium expressed their appreciation for the informative and constructive contribution made to the discussions by representatives of non-governmental organisations and noted the recommendations proposed by them.

Recommendations and Strategies for Action

The Colloquium adopted the following recommendations and Strategies for Action:

Information and publicity activities

16. States that become parties to international human rights treaties should publicise that fact widely among their community and ensure that copies of the treaties, reports of the country under the treaty and other relevant documentation (where possible in local languages) are made widely available,

17. The Gender and Youth Affairs Division of the Commonwealth Secretariat should ensure that copies of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women and Assessing the Status of Women: A Guide to Reporting under the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (2nd ed. 1996) are made available to the judiciary and to the Bar Association in each State of the Commonwealth.

Access to information and exchange of information

18. The Commonwealth Secretariat, the United Nations and its agencies, and other bodies should explore ways of making available to judges, judicial officers and practitioners access to electronic sources of information on human rights, in particular relating to the human rights of women, and should ensure the availability of basic international and comparative materials in libraries accessible to the judiciary and the profession.

19. Judges in Caribbean and other Commonwealth countries who render decisions in constitutional human rights cases, in cases in which international instruments are invoked or which significantly advance the rights of women under domestic legislation should, as far as possible, send copies of those decisions to:

- the Commonwealth Secretariat, for inclusion in the Commonwealth Law Bulletin
- Interights, for inclusion as appropriate, in the Commonwealth Human Rights Law Digest
- in the Caribbean, to the CARICOM Secretariat and universities in the region for appropriate publication.

20. The Commonwealth Secretariat and the CARICOM Secretariat should endeavour to ensure that all judges in the Caribbean as well as in other regions are provided with access either in electronic or hard copy format, to the Commonwealth Human Rights Law Digest, the Commonwealth Judicial Journal, the Commonwealth Law Bulletin, and the Law Reports of the Commonwealth and regional publications.

21. Judges, practitioners and academics should be encouraged to submit articles and other material for publication in the Commonwealth Law Bulletin Journal and regional publications.

22. The Commonwealth Secretariat and the CARICOM Secretariat should explore ways of developing, either on their own or in conjunction with other suitable bodies or NGOs, a World Wide Web (WWW) site which would contain human rights and related materials, including material on the gender dimensions of human rights, and which would complement the existing work in this area of bodies such as the United Nations, the ILO and United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.

Judicial studies programmes and continuing legal education on gender issues

23. Gender-sensitive training and information about women's human rights should be provided to the judiciary, lawyers, law-enforcement agencies, court personnel, law students and community leaders. Legal literacy programmed to raise public awareness should also be undertaken.

24. Those bodies involved in judicial education seminars at the international, regional and national level should cooperate in and coordinate their activities in order to make best use of limited resources.

25. The Commonwealth Secretariat should explore ways in which the experiences of the two series of Judicial Colloquia on human rights which it had organised might be drawn on in order to ensure that gender issues are fully integrated in any future judicial training in which the Secretariat was involved.

26. The Commonwealth Secretariat, in liaison with the CMJA and other organisations with expertise in the area, should explore the need for the development of further training materials on international human rights, generally and as they relate specifically to women.

Operation of the legal system and reform of the law

27. The language used in human rights instruments, national legislation and in court proceedings and judgments should be non-sexist, and, as appropriate, gender-neutral language should be employed.

28. Where general or specific reviews of the law are undertaken by Law Reform Commissions or other bodies, the terms of reference of such reviews should ensure that the impact of existing and proposed laws on the human rights of women is fully taken into account in the process of review and reform of the law.

Operation of the courts and the court system

29. States should, where possible, put in place information systems for the production of gender disaggregated data on the operation of the courts for research, policy formulation and for planning timely interventions.

30. Notwithstanding the obligation to ensure a fair trial for all, judges and prosecutors are encouraged to be vigilant about the withdrawal of cases in order to ensure that the legal system fully protects the rights of women and girls.

Support services and programmes

31. States should, where possible, establish a comprehensive legal aid programmes to ensure the availability of legal aid or pro bono legal assistance for court and administrative proceedings in which redress for violations of human rights, including those suffered by women and girls, is sought. States should also establish programmes for counselling of women and girls who have suffered violations of rights, as well as special programmes for offenders.

32. States should establish specially trained units in the police force for the investigation of offences by and against women and girls, the functions of which should include counselling for those who have been subject to abuse.

The use of international and regional human rights procedures

33. Lawyers should consider whether more effective use could be made of applicable international and regional complaint procedures to advance women's human rights, in cases in which a remedy was not available within the domestic system. These procedures included the procedures of the Organisation of American States, including those of the Inter-American Commission under the American Declaration of the Rights of Man, the American Convention on Human Rights and the Inter-American Convention on the Prevention, Punishment and Eradication of Violence against Women (Convention of Belém do Pará), the procedures of the Council of Europe under the European Convention on Human Rights, and the procedure under the First Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, as well as applicable complaints procedures relating to the implementation of international labour conventions.

Enhancement of regional cooperation and exchange of information

34. The Commonwealth Secretariat, the CMJA, and other responsible international, regional or sub-regional agencies, should explore, in close collaboration with the judges of each region and taking into account existing institutions and programmes, the desirability of the establishment of a regional judicial studies institute or programme to facilitate continuing judicial education and the exchange of legal material among the judges of the region.

Follow Up

35. The Colloquium recommended that a Reference Group be constituted for follow-up of the recommendations contained in this document, as well as assessing the impact of previous Judicial Colloquia on the domestic enforcement of international human rights norms through national courts.

36. The Colloquium recommended broad dissemination of the Victoria Falls Declaration, the Hong Kong Conclusions and the Georgetown Recommendations and Strategies for Action, as well as the reports of those Judicial Colloquia.

37. The Colloquium requested the Commonwealth Secretariat to transmit the Georgetown Recommendations and Strategies for Action to:

- the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting to be held in Edinburgh in October 1997
- the triennial meeting of the CMJA to be held in Capetown in October 1997
- and the next meeting of Commonwealth Law Ministers.

Denarau Declaration on Gender Equality

Resident Magistrates of Fiji, Denarau, Fiji, 1 June 1997

The Magistrates of Fiji attended, participated and made the following Declaration at the Gender Equality Training Workshop dated 30 May 1997 – 1 June 1997 at the Sheraton Hotel, Denarau, Fiji.

1. We note and reaffirm the recommendations made by senior judges in the Commonwealth contained in the Victoria Falls Declaration; the Hong Kong Conclusions and the Georgetown Recommendations and Strategies of Action which recognises the role of the courts in eliminating legal discrimination against women and children.
2. In recognition that Article 16 of the 1990 Constitution of Fiji prohibits inter alia discrimination against women, we recognise our fundamental duty to ensure the fair and equal administration of justice.
3. Further we acknowledge that this requires us to be alert to instances of gender discrimination in the law and in the administration of justice, and to undertake such measures as lies within our power to redress or eliminate any such discrimination.
4. We also recognise the community's understanding of fairness and equality will evolve over time and that magistrates have both the power and responsibility to adapt the common law or interpretations of constitutional provisions and legislation to better reflect international norms and conventions and to meet the changing circumstances of society.
5. The full enjoyment by women and children of their human rights can best be realised through the creative interpretation and effective enforcement of these rights by the courts. This can only occur if there is an independent and competent judiciary which enjoys the confidence of the people it serves.
6. We, the Magistrates, commit ourselves to adopting the attached action plan as guidelines in our courts to deal with the problems of gender bias in particular against women and children.

APPENDIX

We will be sensitive to court procedures to eliminate cross examination of sexual assault survivors and rape victims on past sexual experience.

We will be sensitive to the realities experienced by women in fostering reconciliation in criminal assault cases and sentencing.

We need to be aware of the Rape Trauma Syndrome and Battered Wife Syndrome.

We need to continuously examine our work practices and procedures to see if gender sensitivity is being addressed.

We have a role in educating our community on attitudes and behaviours of court users, police functions and powers to eliminate discrimination against women and children.

In the area of family law we need to be aware that the court's attitudes towards promotion of reconciliation can negatively affect the interest and welfare of women and children.

In the area of custody and maintenance we need to eliminate double standards and enforce maintenance orders more diligently and apply maintenance principles based on needs and ability to pay.

In the distribution of matrimonial property we will need to recognise the unpaid contribution of women in the home.

Pacific Island Judges Declaration on Gender Equality in the Courts

Denarau, Fiji, 4 July 1997

The seminar addressed women's human rights and the application within national legal systems of international norms relating to these rights. The seminar was organised and funded by the Pacific Regional Human Rights Education Resource Team (RRRT) and held at Denarau, Fiji. Kim Stanford-Smith chaired and facilitated it with Justice Dame Silvia Cartwright, Justice Douglas Campbell, Justice Daniel Fatiaki, Joni Madraiwiwi, Imrana Jalal and Nazhat Shameem. Justice Daniel Fatiaki gave the keynote address. The participants included The Chief Justices of Niue, Solomon Islands, Vanuatu and Western Samoa, Judges of the Court of Appeal of Fiji, Vanuatu, Kiribati and Judges of the High Court of Cook Islands, Fiji, Nauru, Niue, Papua New Guinea, Vanuatu and Supreme Courts of Western Samoa.

The participants reaffirmed the Victoria Falls Declaration of Principles for Promoting the Human Rights of Women (1994), the Hong Kong Conclusions (1996) and the Georgetown Recommendations and Strategies for Action (1997) which promulgated the following principles:

Judges recognised that many opportunities exist for judges to draw on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) and Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) and other international human rights instruments so as to interpret and apply creatively constitutional provisions, legislation, common law and customary law. No law, custom, tradition, culture or religious consideration should be invoked to excuse discrimination against women.

And commended these principles to Pacific Island countries for acceptance and implementation.

The participants stressed that:

Every judge in his or her own court should strive to meet a high and consistent standard of fair and equal treatment of all members of the community.

Every judge should recognise and where appropriate take steps to implement the principle of gender equality.

And therefore the participants agreed that to be more effective in the delivery of justice that is consistent with the need for gender equality, judges need:

- 1) Access to current resource material on equality issues and the means to promulgate them;
- 2) Regular Continuing Judicial Education (CJE) meetings on equality issues;
- 3) Regular judicial skills training including such matters as delivery of oral and written reasons, information on and training in computer technology and research facilities;

- 4) To be part of an information network keeping judges informed of legal and judicial developments;
- 5) Appropriate dialogue with the community consistent with judicial independence;
- 6) To develop regular organised collegial contact locally, nationally and regionally, both in person and by electronic means.

The participants agreed that in order to meet the above needs:

- a) Sufficient recurrent funding must be provided to develop efficient and effective national CJE Programs and these programme's should draw upon any regional resources e.g. the proposed Pacific Judicial Centre or resource persons;
- b) Every judge should take all necessary steps to meet the identified needs expressed herein.

The Tanoa Declaration on Human Rights in the Law

Pacific Regional Gender Equality Training Workshop for Chief and Senior Magistrates 1999

Tanoa Hotel, Nadi, Fiji, 7 March 1999

The training for Chief and Senior Magistrates addressed gender equality and its relevance to the Pacific Regional Magistrates' Courts. The training was organised and funded by the UK Department for International Development's Pacific Regional Human Rights Education Resource Team (RRRT) and was held at the Tanoa International Hotel, Nadi. The resource persons included Hon Justice Neil Buckley (Judge, Family Court of Australia), Hon Justice Daniel Fatiaki (Judge High Court, Fiji), Hon Justice Ratu Joni Madraiwiwi (High Court Judge, Fiji), Chief Magistrate Salesi Temo (Fiji), Director of Public Prosecutions (Fiji) Ms Nazhat Shameem, Ms P Imrana Jalal, and Ms Vani Dulaki (Chief Resource Trainers at RRRT). The participants included Chief and Senior Magistrates from Cook Islands, Fiji, Kiribati, Nauru, Solomon Islands, Tonga, Tuvalu and Vanuatu.

The participants reaffirmed the following judicial and other declarations and conventions:

- The Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948) as the first source of human rights standards of which many articles are reflected in the Constitutions of Pacific Islands countries;
- The Bangalore Principles (1988) formulated at the Judicial Colloquium on the Domestic Application of International Human Rights Norms sponsored by the Commonwealth Secretariat which highlighted that international human rights instruments provided important guidance for courts;
- The Victoria Falls Declaration of Principles for Promoting the Human Rights of Women (1994) emanating from the Commonwealth Judicial Colloquia which encouraged the wider application of international and regional human rights standards at the national level in promoting the human rights of women;
- The Hong Kong Conclusions (1996), emanating from the Asia-Pacific Regional Judicial Colloquium for Senior Judges which highlights the UN Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, and which stated that no law, custom, tradition, culture or religious consideration should be invoked to excuse violence against women;
- The Georgetown Recommendations and Strategies for Action (1997) on the Human Rights of Women and the Girl-Child from the Caribbean Regional Judicial Colloquium for Senior Judges which recognises that the fundamental duty of Judges is to ensure the fair and due administration of justice; this requires Judges to be alert to manifestations of gender discrimination in the law and in the administration of justice and to take such measures as lay within their power to redress such discrimination;
- The Denarau Declaration (1997) emanating from the Gender Equality Training Workshop for Fiji Magistrates which recognises the courts' fundamental duty to ensure the fair and equal administration of justice and that Magistrates have the power and responsibility to adapt common law interpretations of constitutional provisions and legislation to better reflect international norms and conventions and to meet the changing circumstances of society;

- The Pacific Island Judges Declaration on Gender Equality in the Courts (1997) emanating from the Gender Equality Training Workshop for Chief Justices which promulgated the following principles; that many opportunities exist for judges to draw on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW), the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC), and other international human rights instruments so as to interpret and apply creatively constitutional provisions, legislation, common law and customary law. No law, custom, tradition, culture, or religious considerations should be invoked to excuse discrimination against women;
- And they recognise that a separate and independent judiciary is a fundamental and essential organ of a democratic State and as such believe that the judiciary, which includes the magistracy, is duty bound to act consistently with the State Parties' duties and obligations of a ratified convention;
- And recommend that human rights and gender training should be an integral component of the curriculum of the Law School of the University of the South Pacific;
- And further recommend that continuing legal education is a necessary requirement for all lawyers and judicial officers around the region to enhance awareness and knowledge of international developments in gender and human rights.
