The Tuvaluan government is pleased to present its National Action Plan (NAP), which has been designed to reflect Tuvalu’s commitment, priorities and concerted efforts towards building our nation where the human rights of our people are safeguarded and protected. As a small island nation, we can be proud that we are also the first among the Pacific Island states and one of the few countries in the world to have a comprehensive National Action Plan for human rights.

In relation to this endeavour, we thank all those who have been tasked with putting this living document together; especially the acting Attorney General, Laigane Italeli Maina, through her proficient leadership, and her team.

This National Action Plan has not been drawn in isolation from Tuvalu’s existing human rights obligations as it also draws on Tuvalu’s Universal Periodic Review (UPR) commitments, treaty body recommendations and our own internal priorities as stipulated in our national development plan, the Te Kakeega III.

When designing this National Action Plan, we were mindful of the challenges that come with implementing various commitments. Our main challenge is dealing with climate change and its adverse impact on the human rights of our people, but we are a resilient people and as a nation, we will continue to strive to better the lives of our people while raising our voices to highlight these impacts of climate change. We will call upon the donor communities and international communities, who demand so much of us, to also assist us in navigating through our challenges while continuing to improve the living conditions of our people. In doing so, no Tuvaluans will be left behind. Our development priorities will assist the marginalised, the old and the young, our men, women and children, our people with disabilities and all those who call Tuvalu home. It is in realising our most basic and fundamental rights that we realise our basic dignity and worth as human beings.

Tuvalu Mo Te Atua

Hon Enele Sosene Sopoanga
Prime Minister
Acknowledgments

The Government of Tuvalu expresses its sincere appreciation to the Pacific Community Regional Rights Resource Team (SPC RRRT), especially Mr. Romulo Nayacalevu, Senior Human Rights Adviser, for the technical assistance in the development of this National Action Plan.

The process of developing this plan was the result of a cabinet decision in 2016. The cabinet decision was the result of a human rights consultation, which was organised by SPC RRRT for the Tuvalu Members of Parliament in 2015.

SPC RRRT was assisted by UN Women and the UNICEF Pacific Office during the National Action Plan workshop. Workshop participants included government ministries, non-governmental organisations (NGOs) and other stakeholders. Participants guided the process and provided the information and priority areas that are reflected in this plan.

The government congratulates and thanks all ministries and departments for being part of this important process for Tuvalu. Special thanks to the acting Attorney General, Mrs. Laigane Italeli Maina, Mr. Efren Jogia, Senior crown counsel and the staff of the Attorney General’s office for coordinating this process.

Tuvalu MP’s Consultation on Human Rights and Good Governance by SPC RRRT, Funafuti 2015. It was following this MP’s consultation that Cabinet approved the formulation of this NAP.

Introduction

Tuvalu’s 1986 Constitution protects and promotes the human rights of Tuvaluans while recognising the importance of culture and traditions. Human Rights and culture are not opposing concepts but mutually reinforcing in that they promote the entitlements and privileges of all Tuvaluans to live a life that protects their humanity and dignity. The language of rights may be a ‘foreign’ concept to Tuvaluans, yet its realities are manifested in the daily needs of the people and it encompasses all human rights such as the right to life, education, health and housing, as well as freedom of expression, opinion, thought and religion, and even cultural rights.

It is important for the state and its people to continue to work towards realising basic fundamental rights and freedoms. The state has the duty of realising and providing these rights to the people, and the people who are the rights holders have a duty to hold the state accountable for the realisation of their human rights (see diagram below). In Tuvalu, the discourse on human rights must consider the principles on which the Tuvaluan society is founded, including religious, cultural and traditional values. However for human rights to flourish in Tuvaluan society, there is a recognised need for ongoing dialogue between the government and the people of Tuvalu as they progressively respond to the changing needs of the Tuvaluan society with human rights principles.

This National Action Plan (NAP) captures Tuvalu’s existing commitments under human rights treaties to which it is a state party – the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC), the Convention on the Elimination of all forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) and the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD). It also captures Tuvalu’s commitments under the Universal Periodic Review (UPR), the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and the Te Kakeega III- 2016–2020 (TK III). This NAP strives to consolidate the government’s human rights commitments in ensuring a systematic and coordinated approach to delivery of the government’s commitment and achieving other desired development outcomes in order to strengthen the realisation of human rights in Tuvalu.

As a small island nation, Tuvalu is constantly challenged by many competing factors and priorities that can hamper the realisation of fundamental human rights. One of the biggest threats to Tuvalu is climate change and its impact on the basic rights of Tuvaluans, such as the right to housing or food. The world, especially the big polluters, needs to keep its commitment to reducing carbon emissions, as well as commit more money and resources to assist small island nations like Tuvalu in preparation for the global and climatic changes that pose a great threat to the human rights and the dignity of Tuvaluans.

Development partners, including the Pacific Community, the Pacific Islands Forum Secretariat, Pacific Island Development Forum, United Nations agencies and international donors should work with the Tuvaluan Government in realising human rights, especially as envisioned in Tuvalu’s Te Kakeega III and captured in this NAP. Mutual cooperation and reciprocated ability will undoubtedly strengthen Tuvalu’s commitment to better protect the rights of its people, especially those who are most vulnerable and marginalised.

Process for implementing this National Action Plan (NAP)

The Government of Tuvalu is committed to realising human rights in order to improve the lives of individuals in Tuvalu. The government is committed to advancing all of the responsibilities identified in this NAP. In implementing this plan, the government will look to donors, development partners and others for assistance in ensuring that the goals and objectives of this plan are realised. The TK III is the framework for ensuring that development priorities continue to be considered and prioritised for the most vulnerable people in the community.

The government’s human rights focal responsibilities are currently dealt with by the Office of the Attorney General. The overseeing of treaties is provided by the CRC, CEDAW and the CRPD taskforces. However, human rights is mainstreamed in government through key departments and ministries including the Office of the Prime Minister, which houses the Gender Affairs Department; the Ministry of Education, as, which houses the CRC (although discussions are ongoing to move the responsibilities of the CRC to the AG’s office); and the Ministry of Health. The process of implementation for this NAP is drawn from the Handbook on NAP by OHCHR and is as follows:

- Consult with government and NGOs
- Appoint focal ministry
- Government endorsement
- Public announcement
- Organise meeting with stakeholders on plan
- Establish coordinating committee
- Frequent meetings of coordinating committee
- Conceptualise plan
- Establish Secretariat
- Establish sectoral working groups
- Consult with NGOs, donors, development partners and interest groups
- Prepare baseline study
- Identify priorities, issues of special focus, needs of vulnerable groups
- Consider time frames
- Cabinet approval
- Launch plan
- Regular meetings of coordinating committee
- Work with implementing partners
- Action by implementing agencies and partners
- Consultation and networking
- Media and dissemination of strategies
- Human rights education
- Parliamentary endorsement
- Develop reporting formats
- Semi-annual assessments by coordinating committee
- Input by civil society groups
- Consultations and networking
- Feedback to implementing agencies
- Reports to parliament and general public
- Consider annual reports on implementation
- Appoint review panel
- Reports to parliament and general public
- Makes recommendations for successor plan
Tuvalu’s development priorities are found in the Te Kakeega III, which is the blueprint for the government’s action on improving the quality of life of the people of Tuvalu. While the Te Kakeega III is written in terms of development, most of the aspirations within this key government document are linked to human rights, including the rights to education, health, life, housing, employment, voting and participation in both national and local government. In order to fulfil these development goals, the government is also realising fundamental human rights that emanate from its obligations under international human rights instruments such as CEDAW, CRC, CRPD and the UPR process. The table below shows the linkage between the Te Kakeega III and the key human rights instruments that Tuvalu has ratified, including the Universal Declaration for Human Rights (UDHR), which is the world’s leading document on international human rights.

Extract of SIDS ACCELERATED MODALITIES OF ACTION [S.A.M.O.A.] Pathway

...We reaffirm the importance of freedom, peace and security, respect for all human rights, including the right to development and the right to an adequate standard of living, including the right to food, the rule of law, gender equality, women’s empowerment, reducing inequalities and the overall commitment to just and democratic societies for development.
Linking the NAP to the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs)

As a member of the international community, Tuvalu has committed to realising the SDGs. The SDGs complement Tuvalu’s ongoing and existing development priorities in the TK III as well as other international human rights commitments. The table below captures the complementarity between the SDGs, human rights generally and the recommendations from Tuvalu’s second cycle of the UPR. While there are 17 SDGs, this section does not exhaustively discuss all their linkages to human rights. However, as envisaged by the United Nations, the goals are, over a 15-year period, envisioned to end poverty, protect the planet, and ensure prosperity for all, while welcoming the participation of all people in a country. Tuvalu will continue to work with development partners and donors to realise progress around some of these crucial areas.

The TK III also draws from the Small Island Developing States (SIDS) S.A.M.O.A Pathway. This demonstrates the correlation between the existing commitments of Pacific governments to SDGs and the commitment of SIDS to the 15 priority areas that are within the SIDS strategy, which are drawn from the Barbados Programme of Action and the Mauritius Strategy. These 15 priority areas include sustained and sustainable, inclusive and equitable economic growth with decent work for all; climate change, sustainable energy, disaster risk reduction, oceans and seas, food security and nutrition; water and sanitation; sustainable transportation; sustainable production and consumption; management of chemicals and waste; health and NCDs; gender equality and women’s empowerment; social development; biodiversity and invasive alien species.

Whether Tuvalu’s commitment is in the TK III or the SIDS Samoa Pathway, they are not isolated commitments to human rights but rather form part of the government’s commitment to improve the quality of life for people in Tuvalu (see below). Ultimately, the goal of SDGs and the Samoan Pathway is to reduce poverty, encourage sustainable development and ensure that all people have access to the most basic resources that will ensure the full realisation of their human rights. An illustrative guide of the SDGs and human rights from OHCHR follows this table.

“Every child, every woman, every citizen, every community, should know these Sustainable Development Goals and own the rights under these goals. These goals must be advocated as widely as possible to all global citizens, through technological advances that we have for information and any communication, so that these goals can be understood, owned and adhered to by one and all. These goals must bring accountability to our leaders, to our development partners, to the private sector, to religious bodies and to the youthful generation. 8. We must aspire to deliver tangible outcomes in all countries and to be all inclusive in participation, design, decision making, and implementation and in the gains derived from them. Each country must take the reins and drive their own pursuits befitting their circumstances and capabilities.”

Minister of Foreign Affairs, Honourable Taukelina Finikaso at The 70th Session of the United Nations, General Assembly, General Debate October 2, 2015 New York

Protection and Promotion of Human Rights in Tuvalu

As a small under-developed island nation, Tuvalu will not shy away from its commitments and obligations in realising the basic and most fundamental human rights of its people. While working amidst developmental challenges and constraints, the government is committed to providing basic services and implementing its development priorities as reflected in the Te Kakeega III, in order to realise key priorities that will better protect and promote human rights in Tuvalu. The government is mindful that Tuvalu’s commitments to human rights stems from a duty to promote and protect the rights of individuals as set out in its international human rights obligations. The government will therefore continue to work with its development partners and donors to strengthen its commitment to better realise the human rights of all Tuvaluans. Tuvalu is a state party to three core human rights treaties (CEDAW, CRC and CRPD). Tuvalu has also engaged with both cycles of the Universal Periodic Review (1999 and 2013) and has issued an open invitation to the United Nations Special Procedures in April 2013. In 2012, the UN Special Rapporteur on the right to water and sanitation visited Tuvalu and issued crucial recommendations that the government is in the process of implementing within its available resources and capacity.

“...Still, whether or not a causal chain can be established between particular emissions of greenhouse gases and particular effects of climate change, States have obligations to address the harm climate change causes to human rights. In particular, States have legal obligations to provide international assistance and cooperation towards the full realization of human rights, regardless of the establishment of human rights violations. International cooperation requires State parties to refrain from actions that interfere, directly or indirectly, with the enjoyment of the rights to water and sanitation in other countries. Any activities undertaken within the State party’s jurisdiction should not deprive people in another country of the ability to realize the rights to water and sanitation.”...”

| 8.1 Penal Code | 2. Further review of the Penal Code to consider expanding the definition of rape to include marital rape and the use of objects and other instruments, including sanctioning situations where men and boys are also raped:
   i. Prevention of human trafficking and other serious crimes as contained in the Rome Statute. | AG’s office | 2017–2018 | • Review conducted
   • Laws passed that provide these basic protections of human rights. |
| 8.2 Other laws | The government will ensure that new laws take into consideration the government’s commitment under existing human rights treaties that Tuvalu is a state party to. Government will consult with key stakeholders on new laws that aim to limit certain rights; or laws that have an impact on the rights of women, children or people with disabilities. | AG’s office | Per TK III timelines (Pg. 73) | • Review conducted
   • Laws passed that provide these basic protections of human rights. |
Human rights issues in the Tuvalu community

Human Rights need to be translated and communicated in a language that the community understands. The perception that human rights conflicts with cultural values and traditions may be based on bias, misunderstanding and lack of knowledge and awareness, and as such, it is imperative for the government of Tuvalu to design this framework as a guide to promoting, protecting and fulfilling the government’s human rights commitments to its people.

Climate Change is a crucial issue that affects a range of rights, especially the right to life. The right to food, basic survival, and property are threatened with the increased frequency of changing weather patterns and natural disasters. The government will continue to raise the issue of climate change in international and regional forums to ensure that global action is mobilised. At home, the government will work on mitigation strategies as well as design frameworks and policies that will prepare Tuvalu for addressing the threats of climate change.

Despite its commitment to ensuring that all human rights obligations are met, the government acknowledges the significant limitations on resources and capacity to meet these obligations. The government will continue to progressively realise human rights issues within the current context and resources, and work towards fulfilling key priority areas including those identified in the Te Kakeega III.

Benefits of National Action Plans

A national action plan will:

- review a country’s human rights needs;
- raise awareness of human rights issues among government officials, security authorities, civil society organisations and the general public;
- mobilise a broad spectrum of society in a cooperative atmosphere;
- propose realistic activities;
- set achievable targets;
- promote linkages with other national programmes, particularly in the areas of development and education; and
- generate a commitment to action.

The outcomes of a national action plan will include:

- stronger legal frameworks, embracing firmer adhesion to international norms, more effective incorporation of human rights standards in domestic law and more effective rule of law;
- better protection for individuals;
- stronger culture of human rights;
- stronger national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights;
- more effective social programmes that enhance the quality of life for all, particularly vulnerable groups; and
- improved national harmony, reducing risks of internal conflict.

Tuvalu Human Rights National Action Plan
2016–2020
It is recognised that genuine improvements to human rights observance require not just resources and finances but also political will. To bring about a strong culture of human rights, including the prevention of domestic violence or child abuse, there is a need for attitude change, education and training, capacity building and a strong judiciary. The Government of Tuvalu is working towards strengthening its commitment in these areas as well as ensuring that the dialogue to better protect human rights is ongoing.

Some of the key human rights issues in the community that the government will systematically address during the life of this NAP are captured in Table 4.

Children’s Rights

Tuvalu ratified the CRC in 1995 and submitted its initial and second periodic report in 2012. Tuvalu appeared before the CRC committee in 2013 via satellite at the UNICEF office in Suva. The concluding observations were issued by the committee later the same year and form the basis of the areas of this action plan that focus on children’s rights. A sample of the matrix compiled by the AG’s office with the Department of Education and UNICEF Pacific is attached as Annex II. The full matrix for Tuvalu’s next CRC report due in 2017 is available from the said agencies.

The Ministry of Education, Youth and Sports is responsible for the submission of and also the implementation of the CRC State Report and its recommendations.”

Women’s Rights

Tuvalu ratified CEDAW on 6 September 1999. Tuvalu submitted its initial report and second report in 2009 while the 3rd and 4th periodic reports were submitted in 2012. Tuvalu appeared before the CEDAW committee in Geneva in 2015. The concluding observations issued by the committee form the basis of the areas of this action plan that focus on women’s rights. A draft matrix compiled by the Gender Affair’s Department under the Prime Minister’s Office is attached as Annex III. Tuvalu’s next report to the committee is due in 2019. Furthermore, Tuvalu’s commitment to gender equality is stipulated in the TK III (Pages 25–26) and over the years, Tuvalu has significantly progressed in the areas of gender equality and continues to address the systemic issue of violence against women. The Family Protection and Domestic Violence Act 2014 marks a significant milestone in ensuring women in our society are better protected. The government will continue to strengthen various areas including political representation of women both at the national and local governmental level through their participation in the Falekaupules (see TK III, Page 78). The government is committed to amending existing laws to close legal gaps, particularly those relating to inheritance, marriage, and asset related policies with gender dimensions (TK III, Page 25).

"Women in Tuvalu are beginning to be more active and participate more in societal activities as a result of the ongoing processes of awareness programs undertaken by the Department of Women in conjunction with the Tuvalu National Council of Women (TNCW) and other concerned departments. Most of these awareness programs such as consultations, trainings and workshops are achieved through funding from overseas donors. Without the financial assistance from donor partners, there is very limited financial resource to improve and promote human rights related issues within the community."

Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Tuvalu ratified the CRPD in 2013 and is due to submit its initial report in 2016. While this section is filled without reference to any concluding comments, as is the case in the women’s and children’s rights section, it takes into consideration Tuvalu’s obligations under the substantive articles in the CRPD. It then links these rights of persons with disabilities to the commitments of the government under the TK III. The obligations identified under this action plan are not new or additional obligations to the government’s overall existing commitments and obligations; rather, they complement the development commitments under the TK III and SDGs. DFAT is also supporting a Disability Study in Tuvalu with key partners Fusi Alofa and the Government of Tuvalu which will continue to inform further areas of intervention and support around disability rights.

“The need for integration and inclusion of women and girls with disabilities in all aspects of society is set out in international human rights conventions. Most Pacific Island countries have ratified one or two relevant conventions and some of their constitutions provide for some human rights. Despite these efforts, the challenge has not yet been met. The data, research and anecdotal evidence drawn on by this study show that, despite some helpful laws, policies and systems of practice in some countries, compared to their disabled male or non-disabled female peers..., women with disabilities: are less educated; experience higher rates of unemployment; are more likely to be abused; are poorer; are more isolated; experience worse health outcomes; generally have lower social status....”

With relevant focal points in the Women’s Affairs Department dealing with Tuvalu’s CEDAW obligations, the Ministry of Education and Attorney General’s office dealing with CRC and the Attorney General’s office dealing with CRPD and the UPR, these taskforces will draw upon technical support from UN Agencies and SPC RRRT. In conjunction with this NAP, these agencies will continue to support the design and implementation of matrices that contain all the recommendations received from both treaty committees and UPR and use it to track progress on the recommendations specific. A sample of the UPR, CRC and CEDAW observations and recommendations are annexed herein. The full matrices for CEDAW, CRC and the UPR can be obtained from the Office of the Attorney General.

... “Tuvalu is immensely encouraged, by the actions of world leaders this week, by the strong leadership of our Secretary General, and the goodwill of humanity. The adoption of the New York Declaration on the Movement of Migrants and Refugees, and the compounding commitment to SDG 2030, and the many countries that have ratified the Paris Agreement on Climate Change, have given us renewed trust and confidence in the work of this Body, the UN, to rise to our hope for the security, progress, and protection of our human rights. But this said, we must deliver on our words....

On development, we are pleased that we now have a united front - our Sustainable Development Agenda 2030 underpinned by the foundational principles of interdependence, universality and solidarity. No country big or small, rich or poor can do it alone. We must collaborate in durable and genuine partnerships on all the Sustainable Development Goals, to benefit us all. Our urgent focus must be for the individuals at the margins of our societies, who can easily be left behind; honoring their basic inequities and insecurities with practical and timely remedies. We are indeed their beacon of hope and our Agenda 2030 must deliver in guaranteeing the fundamental rights and welfare of all citizens, current as well as future generations.

The oceans ahead are rough and tough. More than ever we need more moral and soul searching, other than just regurgitating good governance and political solutions. More than ever we also need the helping hand of Almighty God, to guide us in our work. We must bring GOD to the center of our human and UN endeavours to ensure reaching our destiny”...

<td>The Committee notes as positive the existence of some legal measures, which safeguard the rights of the child in the State party as well as the formulation of the Family Protection and Domestic Violence Bill. The Committee is, however, concerned that a comprehensive review of all laws relating to children has not been undertaken in the light of the Convention and that the enactment of the Family Protection and Domestic Violence Bill has been delayed.</td>
<td>1) With reference to its General Comment No. 5 (2003) on the general measures of implementation for the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Committee urges the State party to undertake a comprehensive legislative review to ensure compliance of its legislation with the principles and provisions of the Convention and expedite the enactment of the Family Protection and Domestic Violence Bill. The Committee encourages the State party to seek the necessary technical and financial support from international and regional organizations, including UNICEF and OHCHR.</td>

As part of its National Plan assigned the AG’s Office to look into relevant laws that are discriminatory and not in compliance with treaties that the State has ratified. The AGs office is firstly looking into the Constitutional review for which correspondence with respective donors on assistance to recruiting a TA to assist with the review has been attended to. As for reforms to others laws such as the Native Lands Act, the Adoption of Children’s Act, the Penal Code, Marriage Act etc is planned to be proceeded upon once the Constitutional reform has reached completion however the alternative is to proceed with reform on piece meal basis. The Family Protection Act Domestic Violence Bill has been passed and its commence date is the 18th December, 2014 and is now the Family Protection and Domestic Violence Act 2014. The office is now streamlining its implementation process. Education/in progress to review the Education Act to take into consideration all mentioned.</td>

...”Today, we stand here facing one of the greatest challenges of humankind, - climate change. We are at a critical point of history. While we condemn in the strongest sense the barbaric acts inflicted by terrorists on the French people and others, we must seize the opportunity of COP21 to exert the strongest leadership to protect and save human beings from the catastrophic impacts of climate change. We must have the greatest possible political will here in Paris. For a country like Tuvalu, our survival depends on the decisions we take at this Conference. Let me emphasize this point. Our survival as a nation depends on the decisions we take at this Conference. This is not a simply stepping-stone to a better future. We stand on a cliff edge. Either we stand united and agree to combat climate change or we all stumble and fall and condemn humanity to a tragic future... This is the time. We must all stand together and reshape our future. A new, comprehensive treaty on climate change is in our reach. Lets do it now. Let’s do it for the future of humanity. Let’s do it for Tuvalu. For if we save Tuvalu we save the world...”

Speech delivered at the Leaders Events for Heads of State and Government at the Opening of the COP21, 30th November 2015.
